3A

No. Greta and Colin are 'people pleasers', but Anna isn't.

3C

1 Greta works late every time her manager asks her to.
2 Greta doesn't feel comfortable in a new dress until someone has said something nice about it. It's even better if a stranger says something nice about it.
3 Colin always does what his friend wants – order a pizza – when in fact he would like to order sushi.
4 Colin saw a film recently and thought it was boring, but he said nothing because his friends liked it.
5 Anna doesn't pay attention to negative comments on social media and she doesn't get upset about them.
6 Anna is happy to say that she thinks an idea is terrible even if everyone else in the meeting thinks it's a good idea.

4A

Greta uses: For instance, … and Like when ….
Colin uses: Like when … and For example, ….
Anna uses: For example, … and Like …. She goes on to say 'If …', so we can use Like if … as well as Like when ….

The type of bike that's best for her: a commuter bike, especially because you can easily carry things on a commuter bike and you can't on a mountain bike. That two of the commuter bikes can also be used in a forest.

2

The reviews give useful information about:
the weight (26 kg / 22 kg)
the possibility of the bikes being used as either commuter bikes or in the hills / off-road
the price (£1,899 / £1,400)
(There is also information about the range. However, Lynn doesn't really need to know this because in the message exchange in Ex 1B it is clear that she isn't intending to ride the bike for long distances.)

Pronunciation: intonation in summarising phrases

6A

From what he says,
According to (Sam),
Long story short,
in the end,
All in all,
taking everything into account,

6B

The intonation goes up. For some speakers this is a fall-rise and for others it's just a rise. However, the main point is that the voice does not fall.

4 slightly 5 perfectly 6 fairly

How to … keep a conversation going

3A

He asks yes/no questions.
He doesn't 'listen with his whole body' – he's obviously paying attention to other people in the room.

3B

They don't stick with small talk.
They ask questions, but don't use yes/no questions.
They both use 'power questions': Paul asks 'What exactly is 'food technology'?', 'Such as?' and 'For instance?'; and Denise asks 'Why's that?', 'How come?' and 'How did that make you feel?'
We can't see them, but it's obvious that they are both listening well to each other, i.e. 'with their whole bodies'.

How come?
d How did you get into that?
What do you mean by 'researching new flavours'?
What was it like?
How did that make you feel?

4B

POSSIBLE ANSWERS:

1 You know, I've always wondered, what exactly is 'food technology'?
Are you at all interested in cooking?
Can you recommend any good restaurants near here?
2 That's unusual.
It sounds awful.
Really?
Yeah, I can imagine.
3 So, for instance?
How about you?
4 Oh yes, were you on the same course as her?
But you like food?

3C

John probably didn't do well in his exams. He says 'I should have studied more. The exams weren't that difficult, but when you aren't prepared, everything is difficult.'

3D

1 b; Indira says, 'Now I think I'm more relaxed, especially when tasks aren't urgent. At least that's what my colleagues tell me.' If she has colleagues, she probably works in an organisation. Also, she has 'tasks', which are probably related to her work.

2 c; Alexandra says, 'And you don't have to win every argument. If I'd known that when I was younger, I'd have lost more arguments and kept more friends.' If she had lots of arguments, she probably had strong opinions.

3 a; Lisbeth says, 'Make things. Any things. Make meals, make a mess, make art. Just bring things into the world and see what happens.' Making things (especially art) suggests she's creative.

4 c; Lee says, 'We all get things wrong.', 'Now I just laugh about [my mistakes]. I moved on and life got better.' and 'Don't waste your energy with whatifs: 'I should have done this and I shouldn't have done that.' Forget it. It's too late. Pay attention to the here and now.' These sentences all suggest he doesn't worry about his past mistakes.
